WELCOME TO The Snow Ball

How many of us would like to alter time? It is something we don't seem to have enough of, and we can't stop it. Time goes slowly and also quickly, depending on our circumstances. And it is totally out of our control.

Or is it?

In theater, playwrights use time as a story-telling device. We can see the present but also the past and maybe even the future. Through our imagination, time can become fluid. We can become time travelers. The Snow Ball asks us to use our imagination in this way. We see characters in their teens and then thirty years later. The play reminds us that imagining something that is totally impossible is actually kind of fun — and perhaps gives us some unique perspective on the present.

Enjoy the show!
